

Abstract

An automotive consumer to business electronic marketplace system is presented, wherein various aspects of vehicle operation, driver status or driver behavior are monitored and reported to an electronic marketplace. Suppliers of insurance products and other 5 suppliers of automobile products or services may offer vehicle owners prices for products or services based on the data reported. The system may further allow the driver to choose monitoring and reporting options based on discounts offered for certain reporting options.